Newest mayoral family to grace Gracie Mansion

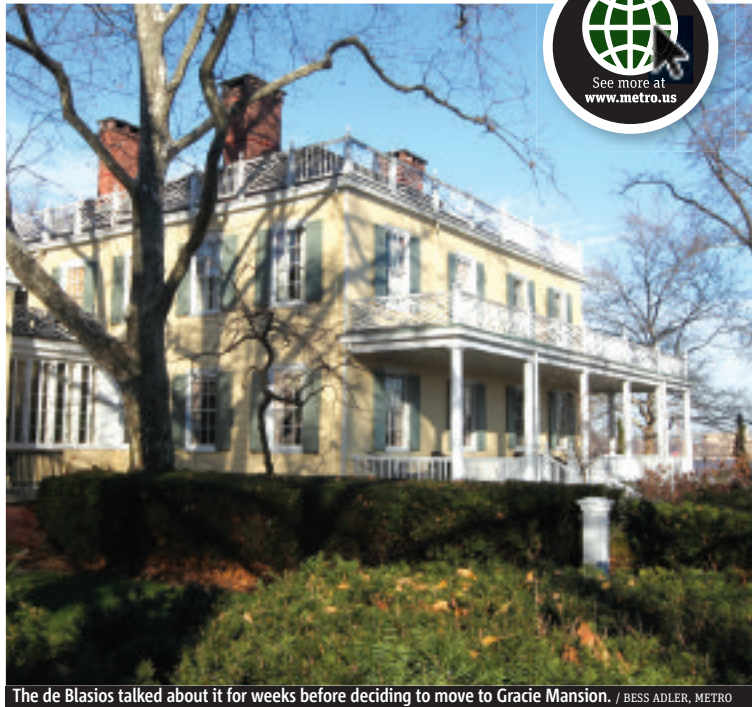

Change. Mayor-Elect Bill de Blasio will move from his Park Slope home to Gracie Mansion.

Leaving their Brooklyn home behind, Mayor-Elect Bill de Blasio and his family will move to Gracie Mansion, which he dubbed "the people's house."

"We will always be Brooklynites," de Blasio said in Park Slope Wednesday, adding his family will move into the official mayoral residence over the next few months.

The family said in a statement they were moving partially out of "respect and gratitude for the people."

But the choice wasn't an easy one for de Blasio, his wife Chirlane McCray, and their two children, Ciara and Dante.

The family has lived in the same Park Slope home for 13 years.

"There's so many routines that I have that I will miss," McCray said.

After living in the 214-year-old Manhattan mansion, the family will return to their comparably modest Brooklyn home.

Standing near the same spot where he launched his campaign nearly 11 months ago, de Blasio said it was important for his family to leave the borough where they've lived for over two decades.

"We see Gracie Mansion as the people's house," the mayor-elect said, adding, "Here, in front of this house, I said all boroughs are created equal and I mean that."

MTA's 'best and worst' list of 2013

The Straphangers Campaign releases the list every year. / GETTY IMAGES

Among many good and bad events to happen to the city's bus and subway system this year, according to the Straphangers Campaign annual "MTA best and worst" list released on Wednesday, were a new MTA chief, a record number of deaths on the rails and a decrease in a federal tax break for commuters. The bus system saw the greatest number of good items, with the expansion of Bus Time throughout Manhattan and Select Bus Service on various lines.

And, of course, the lasting effects of the destruction wrecked by Superstorm Sandy is still having an impact on the city's subway system.

Delays increased by 29 percent during the first quarter of the year, due to track related issues. The R tunnel between Brooklyn and Manhattan will be closed for repairs through 2014, and the G tunnel is closed on many week-ends. The South Ferry station sustained massive damages, and seven downtown Manhattan subway stations require flood "mitigation" measures.

Baby's earrings stolen during day care: NYPD

Desire Santiago, 21, was arrested after police said an 18-month-old's mother noticed her child's earrings were missing

Police said surveillance footage showed Santiago, a worker at the day care center, taking the earrings off the baby.

Santiago was arrested Wednesday and charged with grand larceny and criminal possession of stolen property. ANNA SANDERS

Robbers steal pricey jacket

Two suspects are wanted for stealing a brown crocodile skin jacket worth $40,000 from a high-end clothing store in Manhattan last week.

Police said the two suspects, a man and a woman, entered the men's clothing store Zilli on 57th Street, next to the Four Seasons Hotel, about 5:30 p.m. on Dec. 3.

The woman removed the jacket from a rack and passed it to the man, who took it into a fitting room where he stuffed the coat in a duffel bag. The pair then fled the store without paying, police said.

The man and the woman are described as white, in their mid-20s with thin builds.

Flu shots to be required for some kids

Vaccine. The city's Board of Health voted to take a bold stance toward promoting youth wellness.

In a unanimous decision, the city's Board of Health voted Wednesday to mandate flu shots for young children in day care and preschool.

Taking effect in 30 days, the measure will require kids between 6 months and 5 years old in those childcare programs to receive influenza vaccinations before Dec. 31 each year.

"Young children often pass influenza to other children and family members, who then spread the infection to others in the community," the Health Department said.

Children in day care are already required to be immunized against other diseases, including measles and chicken pox.

Some strongly oppose the mandate.

John Gilmore, executive director of the Autism Action Network, said the

The rule

About 150,000 children between 6 months and 5 years old in day care and preschool will be required to have annual flu shots, though parents may opt out for religious and medical reasons.

- The city said the mandate will stop up to 25,000 kids from getting sick annually.
- A third of NYC children under 5 don't get yearly flu shots, officials said.

group plans to file a lawsuit opposing the ruling in the next few weeks.

"We don't think the City of New York has the authority to create its own vaccine schedule," Gilmore said.

He said Mayor Michael Bloomberg "dumped" the rule on Mayor-Elect Bill de Blasio.

Lis Smith, a spokeswoman for the mayor-elect said de Blasio and his team were reviewing the measure, "but are supportive of proactive policies that promote public health."

Though Gilmore insists flu shots are "ineffective" for children under 5, the Centers for Disease Control said the vaccine's effectiveness is only reduced for those under 2 years old. The institute recommends everyone have an annual shot.

Richard Kanowitz, president of Families Fighting Flu, said his 4-year-old daughter died of the flu before that recommendation was made.

"Had my daughter been vaccinated, her body's response to the flu virus would have been different," Kanowitz said.

New bill would legalize pot in New York State

Going legit. State Sen. Liz Krueger is introducing legislation to regulate and tax marijuana.

A newly introduced bill in the state Senate seeks to legalize and tax marijuana, turning an illicit industry into a potentially profitable one for the government.

State Sen. Liz Krueger, who introduced the bill on Wednesday, said the legislation is modeled after the laws that govern alcohol sales and consumption.

She hopes moving from prohibition to regulation will end what reformers criticize as costly, ineffective policies that harm

New Yorkers of color.

Black New Yorkers are arrested for marijuana possession seven times as often as white New Yorkers, and Latinos are arrested at almost four times the rate of white New Yorkers.

"On their face, the racial disparities in these statistics represent a grave injustice, while the sheer volume of arrests shows just how gross a waste of city and state resources our current policy has become," Krueger said.

Under Krueger's bill, New Yorkers over the age of 18 would be able to possess up to 2 ounces of marijuana, and grow up to six marijuana plants in their home. The minimum age to buy pot would be 21. The bill establishes an excise tax of $50 per ounce of marijuana, and authorizes local governments to charge ad-

The Murray Hill apartment of a Mexican diplomat is being treated as a crime scene as part of an NYPD investigation into the death of the diplomat's 4-month-old son, a law enforcement official said.

The diplomat, Eduardo Rocha Bracamontes, 36, and his wife, Gina Ximena, 26, brought the infant to NYU Langone Medical Center around 9 p.m. Tuesday, police said. The boy was not breathing and was pronounced dead a half-hour later.

The official said NYU Langone notified the Administration for Children's Services but did not notify the NYPD.

Health secretary calls for probe of Obamacare website launch debacle

Rough start. The site's disastrous debut created a political crisis for Obama and fellow Democrats.

U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius on Wednesday asked the department's inspector general to investigate the performance of private contractors in the flawed launch of the Obamacare website.

The health care enrollment website, a key part of President Barack Obama's sweeping health care law, crashed on its Oct. 1 launch and was subjected to weeks of emer-

Enrollment doubled in Nov.

The number of people seeking health insurance under Obamacare more than doubled in November to around 250,000, according to a government report on Wednesday, showing the landmark health care law is still far from its goal of extending coverage to millions of uninsured Americans.

The new tally brought the cumulative total for October and November to 365,000 people who have selected health plans in new online marketplaces.

Stubborn. US gender pay gap narrows, but worries remain

The pay gap between U.S. men and women is closing, but younger women face lingering uncertainty about their future earning power, research showed.

Increased college attendance is helping to boost wages for women of the so-called "Millennial" generation, who say they are more career-driven than their male counterparts, the Pew Research Center said in a report.

"Today's young women are the first in modern history to start their work lives at near parity with men," researchers at the nonpartisan research group wrote in its report, based in part on a review of economic data as well as a recent survey.

In a survey of more than 2,000 adults, including nearly 1,000 Millennials, or those born after 1980, Pew found both men and women saw barriers ahead. REUTERS

Dollars and cents

Their analysis found women aged 25 to 34 made about 93 cents for every dollar earned by men in 2012, the report said. That is better than the rate for women of all ages, who overall made 84 cents in the dollar compared to male workers.

Though the gap has narrowed, there's still a long way to go for gender pay equality.

Boehner: No acceptable plan to extend unemployment

John Boehner said he has not seen an acceptable plan from the White House to extend long-term unemployment benefits that are due to expire on Dec. 31.

Boehner said he told

President Barack Obama last week that he would consider such a plan from the White House.

"I said we would clearly consider it, as long as it was paid for and as long as there are efforts that will help get our economy going again. I have not seen a plan from the White House that meets those standards," he said. REUTERS

US House Republicans voice budget deal support

House Speaker. John Boehner blamed the White House for the lack of action on jobless benefits.

Republicans in the U.S. House of Representatives on Wednesday were falling in line behind a two-year budget deal negotiated behind closed doors, indicating that the normally rambunctious group of lawmakers is not spoiling for a year-end fiscal fight.

Despite conservative groups denouncing the $85 billion plan, the Republican-controlled House could vote as early as today to lock into place a measure that would minimize chances of any further government shutdowns at least until Octo-

Passage in the House, just before the chamber recesses on Friday for the year, would all but guarantee the same in the Senate, probably next week. Rep. Tom Cole told reporters that a majority of his fellow House Republicans would vote for the budget deal, which would replace some of the indiscriminate, across-the-board agency spending cuts scheduled for the next two years.

"A lot of support was expressed for it" during a closed meeting of House Republicans, Cole told reporters.

Fitch Ratings said that while the bipartisan budget agreement reduces the risk of damaging perceptions of the country's creditworthiness, it nonetheless leaves U.S. sovereign credit vulnerable to a downgrade. REUTERS

- The deal announced late on Tuesday by Senate Budget Committee Chairwoman Patty Murray, a Democrat, and House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, a Republican, marked a shift away from three years of standoffs.

On the go. Spotify rolls out free music service to mobile devices

Online music-streaming service Spotify on Wednesday launched a free music service for smartphones and tablets as it tries to hook a fast-growing group of users eager to stream tunes on their mobile devices. Spotify offers free music on desktop computers with advertising, but customers previously had to pay for on-demand connection on their mobile devices.

Its new service will allow listeners to choose the tracks they want to hear for free — with commercial interruptions — in the hope that people will upgrade to subscriptions.

The Presidential selfie heard 'round the world

It seemed so innocent: President Barack Obama posing for a cell phone photo with Britain's David Cameron snapped by Denmark's Prime Minister Helle Thorning-Schmidt at Nelson Mandela's memorial service on Tuesday, as first lady Michelle Obama stared icily forward. But the international uproar afterward was far from light-hearted, with many calling it a "funeral faux pas." British media took Cameron to task, while the Danish media took a more laid-back approach. METRO

Documents. Pilots of Asiana crash knew speed was too low

Pilots of an Asiana Airlines Inc. plane that crash-landed in San Francisco last summer were aware the plane was traveling too slowly and tried to correct it in the final seconds before impact, according to documents released on Wednesday by U.S. aviation safety investigators.

The co-pilot, who was training the pilot flying the plane, thought the autothrottle on the Boeing 777 jet might not have been operating, the documents showed.

The pilot flying the plane said he wasn't sure whether autothrottle, used to set engine thrust power, was maintaining speed, according to the documents.

The National Transportation Safety Board released dozens of detailed documents as it opened an investigative hearing into its causes.

The hearing focused on whether an over-reliance on autopilot systems in modern aircraft has led to degraded human flying skills and increased the risk of accidents.

The Asiana pilots said in interviews with the NTSB that they left their "flight director" system, which includes the autopilot, partially on. In that mode, the system prevented a "wake-up" from hold mode from taking place, Capt. John Cashman, a retired Boeing 777 test pilot, testified at the hearing on Wednesday. The lack of wake-up meant the autothrottle was not going to prevent the plane's speed from slowing, he said. REUTERS

US, Britain stop aid to north Syria after rebels raid supplies

Seizure and suspension. Islamists take over weapons stores.

The United States and Britain suspended non-lethal aid to northern Syria after Islamist fighters seized Western-backed rebel weapons warehouses, highlighting fears that supplies could end up in the wrong hands.

The rebel Free Syrian Army fighting President

Bashar al-Assad said the U.S. and British moves were rushed and mistaken.

In Washington, White House spokesman Josh Earnest said the United States was concerned about reports that Islamic Front forces had seized the buildings belonging to the Syrian Military Council, which is nominally in charge of the FSA.

Syria," Earnest said, adding that humanitarian aid was not affected by the move.

The suspension underlines a crisis for the FSA leadership, which needs international backing to reinforce its credibility and to stop its fighters joining al Qaeda-backed Islamist militants who now dominate the war with Assad.

Fighters from the Islamic Front, which groups six major rebel brigades and which said last week it had quit the FSA, seized the headquarters of the Syrian Military Council and weapons warehouses at the Bab al-Hawa crossing on Syria's northwest border with Turkey.

Malaria control efforts save millions

Global efforts to curb malaria have saved the lives of 3.3 million people since 2000, cutting global death rates from the mosquito-borne disease by 45 percent and by half in children under 5, the World Health Organization said on Wednesday. WHO said in its World Malaria Report 2013 that expanded prevention and control measures helped produce declines in malaria deaths and illness. Of the 3.3 million lives saved, most were in the 10 countries with the highest malaria burden and among children under age 5, the group most afflicted by the disease. "Investments in malaria control, mostly since 2007, have paid off tremendously," said Ray Chambers, the United Nations secretary-general's special envoy for malaria. According to the WHO report, child deaths fell to fewer than 500,000 in 2012. Overall, there were about 207 million cases of malaria in 2012, which caused some 627,000 deaths. REUTERS / GETTY IMAGES

G8 summit calls for AIDS-style fight against dementia

The world needs to fight the spread of dementia in the same way it mobilized against AIDS, a British government minister told a special summit on the disease on Wednesday, saying failure to tackle it would wreck state health budgets.

Global cases of dementia are expected to treble by 2050, yet scientists are still struggling to understand the basic biology of the memory-robbing brain condition, and the medicine cupboard is bare.

"In terms of a cure, or even a treatment that can modify the disease, we are empty-handed," World Health Organization Director-General Margaret Chan told ministers, campaigners, scientists and drug industry executives from the Group of Eight leading economies at the summit in London.

British Health Minister Jeremy Hunt said there were lessons to be learnt from the fight against AIDS, where a 2005 G8 summit played a key role in pushing for better and more widely available drugs.

"We have turned the global tide in the battle against AIDS. Now we need to do it again. We will bankrupt our health care systems if we don't," he said. REUTERS

How to Tell Time Like a Man

*Our digital-analog hybrid has two sides... tough and tougher.
Get it now for an unbelievable $59!*

Your watch shouldn't cost more than your car. It should look and feel like a power tool and not a piece of bling. Wearing it shouldn't make you think twice about swinging a hammer or changing a tire. A real man's timepiece needs to be ready for anything. But that's just my opinion. If you agree, maybe you're ready for the Stauer Centurion Hybrid. Use your Exclusive Insider Promotional Code below and I'll send it to you today for ONLY $59.

This watch doesn't do dainty. And neither do I. Call me old-fashioned, but I want my boots to be leather, my tires to be deep-tread monsters, and my steak thick and rare. Inspiration for a man's watch should come from things like fast cars, firefighters and power tools. And if you want to talk beauty, then let's discuss a 428 cubic inch V8.

Did I mention the $59 price tag? This is a LOT of machine for not a lot of money. The Stauer Centurion Hybrid sports a heavy-duty alloy body, chromed and detailed with a rotating bezel that allows you to track time and speed. The luminous hour and minute hands mean you can keep working into the night. And the dual digital displays give this watch a hybrid ability. The LCD windows displays the time, day and date, includes a stopwatch function, and features a bright green electro-luminescent backlight. We previously offered the Centurion for $199, but with the exclusive promotional code it's yours for ONLY $59!

No matter what, this watch can keep up. Thanks to the Stauer 30-day Money Back Guarantee, you've got time to prove it. If you're not totally satisfied, return it for a full refund of the purchase price. You also get a 2-year replacement guarantee on both movements. But I have a feeling the only problem you'll have is deciding whether to keep the Stauer Centurion on your dresser or tucked inside your toolbox.

Today, Elizabeth Hurley can't see through the fog and Joss Whedon is worried about the message movies are sending.

@ElizabethHurley: Pea souper in London today.

@josswhedon: Movies teach us that a man with daddy issues is a HERO and a man with mommy issues is a sexually dysfunctional serial killer.

Demi Lovato: Drug mule?

Lying to family, smuggling drugs onto planes, hiding booze in soda bottles: At just 19 years old, Demi Lovato's drug abuse was way out of control.

The pop star, who's now 21 and sober, opened up about her wild days before getting help. "I couldn't go 30 minutes to an hour without cocaine, and I would bring it on airplanes," she told Access Hollywood. "I would smuggle it, basically, and just wait until everyone in first class would go to sleep and I would do it right there. I'd sneak to the bathroom and I'd do it."

It wasn't just her fellow passengers — Lovato says she was able to hide her drug use from her mom, and even from her sober companion. "I'm very, very good at manipulating people and that was something that I did in my disease, I would manipulate everyone around me," she admitted.

It was that soda bottle though that was her wake-up call. Lovato says that she was swigging from a Sprite bottle full of vodka at 9 in the morning — on the way to the sober living house where she was staying — when she started throwing up. "I had a moment where I was like, 'Oh my God ... that is alcoholic behavior.'"

Lovato's not the only member of young Hollywood reflecting on a wilder time in their lives: Joe Jonas recently revealed that he smoked marijuana for the first time with Miley Cyrus and Lovato.

It's a bird, it's a plane, it's Jason Momoa! / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Momoa heeds the Bat-Signal

Will Jason Momoa get the same harsh treatment from fanboys as Ben Affleck did?

According to the Hollywood Reporter, the "Game of Thrones" star, who played Khal Drogo on the first season of the hit HBO fantasy, is in talks to join the cast of "Batman vs. Superman," which is fast shaping up to be a sort of "Love Actually" of superheroes, at least in terms of cast size.

In case you just joined the Internet today, I must inform you that "Batman vs. Superman" stars Ben Affleck as Batman. Henry Cavill will reprise his role as Superman and Israeli newcomer Gal Gadot will play Wonder Woman. The production hasn't announced what role Momoa would play in the film, though fans speculate he may be coming onboard to play a villain, possibly Doomsday, who killed Superman (for a while) in the comics in 1992, or the Martian Manhunter.

Hopefully Momoa will get a kinder reception from fans than Affleck. After the "Argo" star won the role off the bat, the nerdosphere's collective head blew off.

"Oh man, I hope the next movie's gonna be 'Batman vs. Daredevil'! All Affleck all the time!!!" tweeted Weird Al.

"Really looking forward to seeing Affleck bring the depth and gravitas to Batman that he brought to 'Daredevil' and 'Gigli,'" said actor and professional geek Wil Wheaton.

Interview. Amy Adams wanted to express the sexuality of her "American Hustle" character.

In "American Hustle," all of the characters — grifters, FBI agents, shady politicians, all involved in the notorious Abscam operation of the 1970s — are trying to be something they're not. It's like acting. But for Amy Adams, who plays Sydney, a con artist pretending to be English, it's more than that.

"She wants to be anyone (other) than who she is. And that's where you meet her. She's already at a point of reinvention," Adams explains. Sydney falls instantly in love with Christian Bale's duplicitous Irving Rosenfeld. "She meets Irving and he presents to her who she wants to be. He sees her as smart, he sees her as intelligent, he sees her as a lady. She feels found. And then he betrays her. That's not cool."

Sydney winds up in cahoots with Bradley Cooper's overzealous FBI agent, which is about more than just revenge. "I think there are moments in going back and forth [between them] in which she's not sure how she feels," she says. "She's not torn between two men so much as she's torn between truth and lying. Is she going to believe a lie she herself helped create, or is she going to believe the truth? The truth hurts; the truth is a lot harder."

Piling into those '70s dresses helped get her into character, but it's more

Amy Adams plays a con artist in "American Hustle." / GETTY IMAGES

On the lips

Kissing Katniss

Inevitably, much ink has been spilled over a brief, lipstick-smearing kiss that Jennifer Lawrence, as Bale's jilted wife, plants on Adams. "I feel like Jennifer made that contribution," she says. "I came up with the idea, but she executed it in a way that felt driven purely by the character. It didn't feel like a moment where two girls are going to kiss on-screen. It was from somewhere emotional. She killed it. And the laugh she gave after? Come on. Jennifer executed it in a brilliant way that sells it comedically and dramatically. It doesn't feel like it shouldn't be in there. It feels organic."

than that. "I was trained as a dancer. It's always been how I tell stories, through my body. I always find movement in a character," she says. "I knew she was going to be a sexual being. I thought about people who have an elegance with their sexuality, a power through their sexuality. Dancing was how I started to feel her. I thought about Ann-Margaret and Cyd Charisse, these dancers who were in control because of the way they moved their bodies."

Her director, David O. Russell, has a checkered history with actors. He was scandalized after his yelling at Lily Tomlin on "I Heart Huckabees" first hit newspapers, then became a viral video hit. And yet actors flock to him, no less because he's since directed three of them (Bale, Melissa Leo and Jennifer Lawrence) to Oscars, and others (Adams included) to nominations. He also has a reputation for pushing actors to extremes.

But Adams sees it differently. "I feel [David] exemplifies reality. He doesn't push it. He shows reality," she claims. "Not everything in reality is subtle and slow. When I lose my cool it is over the top. In life, Amy is over the top at times. That's how we are as humans. He finds the moments when this extreme is the truth for these characters." And he does something else, perhaps even more important. "David always makes sure his characters are multidimensional, and his women — thank you, David — are multidimensional."

Tales from the Golden Age

George Cukor.

The prolific director of classic Hollywood fare gets a complete retrospective.

Golden Age Hollywood director George Cukor is primarily known as a king of "women's pictures," among them 1939's "The Women," which had not a Y chromosome onscreen. But some 50 films in about as many years make him hard to pigeonhole. Besides, not even Cukor liked that description.

As you can see for yourself during the Lincoln Center's Herculean, complete Cukor retrospective, his CV runs the gamut. There's literary adaptations (his 1930s takes on "Little Women" and "Romeo and Juliet"), comedies ("The Philadelphia Story"), one of the best Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn pictures ("Adam's Rib") and one of the worst ("Keeper of the Flame"). There's even the occasional musical ("Les Girls," "My Fair Lady").

What unites them is a certain sophistication. His comedies never let loose, like the screwballs of the '30s, but keep their appearances even when, as in

Judy Garland is at her career best in George Cukor's "A Star Is Born." / LINCOLN CENTER

"Pat and Mike," Tracy and Hepburn run afoul of a hood played by a young Charles Bronson. The cliché is that Cukor's not-so-secret homosexuality explains his peerless work with actresses. But he was as sharp with the men: James Mason is arguably even better than a career-best Judy Garland in "A Star Is Born," Cukor's gutting musical remake of a story he had already filmed in 1932 as "What Price Hollywood?"

Possibly his most famous film was one that only features some of his work: After a few weeks of shooting, he was famously fired from "Gone with the Wind" (not included here), a project he had worked on for over a year prior. The rumor was that Gable was a homophobe, or was at least skeeved that Cukor had (allegedly) been one of his johns during his pre-fame gigolo days. Of course, that hadn't stopped the two from working together on 1934's crime pic "Manhattan Melodrama," the movie John Dillinger saw right before his death.

Cukor slowed in his later years. After winning his only director Oscar for "My Fair Lady" in 1964, his films became strange and unmoored. "Rich and Famous," his 1981 swan song with Jacqueline Bisset and Candice Bergen, is notable for seeming unstuck in time. But there are more pockets of his career that deserve exploration than his final stretch. With this and the epic Barbara Stanwyck retro unwinding at Film Forum, local film fans should have their fill.

Christian Bale, Amy Adams and Bradley Cooper strut through "American Hustle." / FRANCOIS DUHAMEL

ADMIT ONE

Metro rounds up what's in cinemas this week.

2 'Tyler Perry's A Madea Christmas'

The jaw-droppingly prolific playwright/filmmaker/actor/cross-dresser busts out his 15th film in seven years, if "only" his eighth to feature signature creation Madea. But it is the first to boast among the ensemble cast one Larry the Cable Guy.

3 'American Hustle'

The once "difficult" David O. Russell is on his third awards-gobbling romp in a row, with an absurdly powerful cast — a fat, toupeed Christian Bale and a dolled-up Jennifer Lawrence for starters — filling out this telling of the larger-than-life Abscam FBI operation of the '70s.

4 'Saving Mr. Banks'

"Mary Poppins" author P.L. Travers hated hated

Must see

'The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug'

1 Peter Jackson's hubristically super-sized version of J.R.R. Tolkien's first, slender trip to Middle Earth enters its second three-hour installment, with Martin Freeman's hairy-footed adventurer fighting spiders, orcs and a great big dragon (voiced by Benedict Cumberbatch).

"The Hobbit" 's Legolas (Orlando Bloom) prepares to ... wait! Legolas isn't in "The Hobbit" book! / WARNER BROS. PICTURES hated the delightful massacre Walt Disney made of her novels. This movie pretends that maybe she didn't. Emma Thompson plays the belligerent Travers as she clashes with Tom Hanks' rendition of Uncle Walt.

5 'Hours'

Paul Walker had only started promoting this drama when he died suddenly in a car accident. The actor plays a father trying to keep his newborn alive in the wake of Hurricane Katrina.

6 'Some Velvet Morning'

Professional malcontent Neil LaBute returns with this two-hander, with Stanley Tucci as a lawyer

8 'Mandela: Long Walk to Freedom'

Right before his death, the South African freedom fighter finally got his splashy, life-spanning Great Man biopic. Idris Elba does a very good Nelson Mandela impersonation, even after he's buried under credibility-subtracting old age makeup.

9 'Inside Llewyn Davis'

The Coen brothers hit up the Greenwich Village folk scene of the 1960s, relentlessly torturing a musician (Oscar Isaac) as uncompromising as he is unpleasant. Carey Mulligan and Justin Timberlake are among the unfortunates who know him.

10 'Frozen'

The Hans Christian Andersen favorite "The Snow Queen" gets Disney-fied in its latest cartoon extravaganza, which also makes room for a talking snowman (Josh Gad).

who pays a surprise, chatty visit to his former mistress (Alice Eve).

7 'Liv and Ingmar'

The unusual relationship between filmmaker Ingmar Bergman and actress Liv Ullmann (a respected filmmaker in her own right) gets examined in this documentary.

Steven Van Zandt is not a very nice guy

TV. Well, actually he is. But the actor/musician is perpetually playing tough guys.

Most people probably know Steven Van Zandt best as either Tony Soprano's main man, Silvio, or Bruce Springsteen's main man. These days, however, the E Street Band guitarist has a whole new gig, playing a New York mafioso hiding out in Norway on Netflix's "Lilyhammer." Van Zandt produces, writes and stars in the show, which was Netflix's first original series, paving the way for the likes of "House of Cards" and "Orange Is the New Black." For somebody who so frequently plays a mean guy, Van Zandt is quick with a laugh.

How do you think platforms like Netflix are changing television?
I think now we have a new developing world where not only are they letting artists do their thing in an uncompromising way, but for the first time in history we're now seeing TV elevated to the hierarchy of entertainment, above film, and I never thought I'd see that in my lifetime.

Mob mentality

How did you end up playing a mobster again? Is it a writing-what-you-know thing?

[Laughs] I had no intention of doing that. But it happens to be something I know a lot about, so it saved me a whole lot of research! That's how life is, right? You plan and you plan and you plan, and then life just happens to you anyway.

Is it hard convincing people you're a nice guy, always playing mobsters?

[Laughs] No, because I'm not. I'm not a particularly nice guy actually!

You had to take time off from touring with Springsteen to film and Tom Morello (of Rage Against the Machine) filled in for you. Was that tough?

It was unfortunate, but

I feel lucky that my life doesn't overlap more than it does actually. And I was really happy that Tommy was there for Bruce. I did feel a little guilt for abandoning my friend, in that sense. But I was very happy that Tom was there to make up for that, on-stage. I mean, Bruce works hard enough as it is.

What do you enjoy more, acting or music?

I like doing different things, you know? I like to do at least one great thing in every medium.

That's ambitious.

Yeah, well, I mean, Broadway was a new medium for me this past year. And last year I did the score for "Lilyhammer," which was a new thing. And then I just did a big commercial last week, which I've never really done. And I've started writing a book about a hundred times, so I probably need to do that at some point. And I still haven't created a TV show from scratch, which I'd really like to do.

So you're not the nicest guy, but you might be the busiest guy.

EVERYONE'S A CRITIC

Director Peter Jackson has one more "Hobbit" movie to go. / GETTY IMAGES

Interview. Peter Jackson had to soldier through his "Hobbit" trilogy after reading some nonplussed reviews.

While the first "Hobbit" film turned in huge business at the box office, Peter Jackson faced some harsh criticism from fans and reviewers with his return to Middle Earth. And as much as he would have liked to course-correct, there wasn't much wiggle room going into the second installment.

"There wasn't really any ability to respond too much because we had already shot everything pretty much, apart from the 10 weeks of pickups we did this year, half of which was the third movie," he says. "By the time we were done with pickups I was just getting in my groove."

Some things have changed this year though. There's less chest-pumping about high frame rates — in fact, Jackson and company apparently aren't eager to bring up 48 frames per second this time around, though it will be offered at select screenings. And the story is bigger, with more interweaving plot threads to give audiences a break periodically from Bilbo and the dwarfs.

"The good thing with the middle film is that you don't have to set things up; you can just drop into the story assuming that no one is going to see this film that didn't see the first one," he says. "Unfortunately, [despite] the romance of the big screen, the 3-D and ev-everything else, the ultimate life of these movies is going to be one on Blu-rays, download and hopefully for years to come. That is where they are going to find their ultimate resting place. So you are telling a continuous story. It's three movies, but it is telling one narrative arc, and you are trying to make each film work individually. This is the part in the middle where you pick up your foot and put it on the gas pedal."

Stuck in the middle

A 12-month cliffhanger

With the latest installment, "The Desolation of Smaug," Jackson is well aware some viewers might find its cliffhanger ending a bit unsatisfying, with a full year to wait for the conclusion. "We did have a discussion about it. It was just a chance that was very rare where you do ... three films back-to-back, to be able to end on a cliffhanger," he says. "When I was 17, 19 years old, I remember the big 'Empire Strikes Back' cliffhanger. It was, like, three years before the next one came out. We're being pretty generous with one year."

Quoted

"It's three movies, but it is telling one narrative arc, and you are trying to make each film work individually. This is the part in the middle where you pick up your foot and put it on the gas pedal."

Jackson on making "The Hobbit" into three films

Elizabeth Streb: May the 'Forces' be with you

Take flight. This show mixes dance, acrobatics and aerial stunts to defy gravity.

Elizabeth Streb has spent more than 20 years investigating the capacity of the human body by pushing it to the extreme. Her newest work, "Forces," takes physicality to another level — 35 meters high, in fact. Her team of powerhouse performers, whom she calls Action Engineers, hurl themselves from a rising platform that spans the width of the Streb Laboratory for Action Mechanics, an industrial garage in Williamsburg that's been transformed into a center for acrobatics, aerials and questioning physics.

Walking into the loud, renovated warehouse, it is clear that Streb has cultivated a hub for experimentation and education. Performers and audience members co-mingle, waiting for the main event to begin. Then you're ushered into the bleacher-style arena by a live DJ, who comments on the show and leads the raffle (oh yes, it's that kind of performance).

Streb's work is widely celebrated, both here and abroad. She has created an enterprise that entangles performers in stunt work, circus tricks and dance maneuvers with highly engineered machines that make gravity deniable and flight seemingly possible. Packaged with red and yellow tape, the SLAM ecosystem is easily penetrable and ready for the masses.

"Forces" exudes danger; it's a series of action events punctuated by unfiltered interviews of Streb speaking candidly about her interests, inspirations and curiosities through personal anecdotes.

The performers breathe as one; ferocity and focus are constants, trust and bravery resonate. They rotate — in high speed, in multiple directions, on their hands, on their heads — flipping and creating images of heroic figures (and silly ones too). They walk on walls, fly through the air and slam face-first into the ground with minimal padding and an immense amount of training.

You're left pondering mortality, risk and the power of the human body.

Million-dollar dating advice

TV. “Millionaire Matchmaker” Patti Stanger takes on love, sex and everything in between.

Say what you want about Patti Stanger, aka Bravo’s “Millionaire Matchmaker,” but the career dating expert knows a thing or two about the language of love — or, at least, the language of prepping two strangers for an awkward date and hoping they’ve followed her advice.

Now in its seventh season, “The Millionaire Matchmaker” features wealthy but hapless men (and sometimes ladies, too) who turn to Stanger’s dating club in an effort to find that elusive person — The One. And if that unicorn isn’t out there, they at least hope to find someone who can stand their company (and stand to spend their money) long enough to let them in their pants.

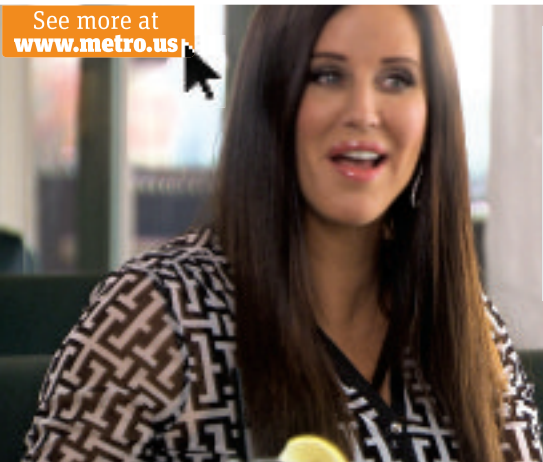

We checked in with the matchmaker in advance of the show’s new season to get some advice for the perennially single among us in the real world.

Give us some advice for those going on a first date.

I think the first thing is making it fun and flirty. Even if you don’t end up with that person, you definitely plan a great date. And if a date isn’t good, then think about fixing that person up with someone you know. If you do that, they’ll owe you, and will usually set you up with someone they know. It’s all part of keeping the train moving out of the station. Six degrees of separation is almost 90 percent of how people meet. And the other thing is getting proactive. Getting online — it’s not for the dateless and the desperate!

Speaking to that, how do you think the dating landscape has changed with online dating? We have more opportunity to meet people we’ve never met before, internationally, not just in the United States. And it’s big. But we’re disposable at the same time. So, even

Bonus question

Cheesiest pick-up line you’ve ever gotten?

“When God made you, he broke the mold.”

On chemistry

I think there is something to be said for instant attraction. People say, “Oh, give the guy a chance, he’ll grow on you.” I don’t buy it, personally. There are two types of “growing on.” There’s the “I’m a friend and you’re a friend and I’ve always wondered what it was like.” And if the kiss is good, then it can actually work. Then there’s also when the chemistry is off-the-chain, like with my boyfriend. When I smell him I go catnip crazy, and yet, if he didn’t have the goods, I wouldn’t have ended up with him, because I am all sexual. If I don’t get enough sex I get crabby. I would rather be with my vibrator. But yes, it can grow. I had friend who went to college with this guy and they lost touch when they graduated and they had this connection but they were always dating other people. Now they’re dating for the first time and they’re in their 50s! You never know what’s going to happen around the corner, you never know what’s going to resurface.

though we’re getting more avenues and more people, we’re discarding quicker and we’re not giving people a chance, because maybe their shoes are wrong or maybe they don’t have enough hair on their head.

So, you wouldn’t suggest Googling a future date?

For a woman, it’s proactive to Google a man. Like, to see that there aren’t 20 girls on the Internet saying that he stuck them with the bill or that he stranded them in a restaurant. But if you’re doing it a) to find out their net worth or b) see what their story is, then you’re going to snooze, you lose.

You have a no sex before monogamy rule.

If you want to get married! And have a serious relationship.

But isn’t there the danger that you’ll establish this monogamy, sans sex, and then find out the other person sucks in bed?

Well, then you get to move right to someone else.

Where do oral sex and handjobs fit into the rule?

Oral sex is fine — for the guy to give you. You can’t give it to him. I’ll give you that one, it’s a one-sided deal, baby. No handjobs either. His penis is off limits. He wants to give it to you, fine, but his penis is off limits.

What’s your rule about paying on a first date — should women do it?

No! Women should never offer unless they are in a monogamous, committed relationship. Let him lead financially. This is not you being cheap. You can do other things; you can cook for him, you can take his shirts to the cleaner, make the reservations for a hotel for a vacation. But the minute you start to put the money down, he who spends the most becomes the “man.” It’s a tough ride for a woman who makes more. He takes it and then he bites the hand that feeds him. Because he’s resentful of it.

Uh, but don’t you think that’s a bad double standard?

It’s is double standard that is never going to change, because men don’t see it that way. It’s all in the you’re committed, monogamy-wise. Otherwise, it’s going to fall into the wrong hands.

What’s the nicest way to blow a guy off?

My favorite way is to just say, “I just don’t feel chemistry — so you’re not going to get laid. I know someone for you, and I will send him or her your way.” You can even text him, email it, over the phone — don’t go overboard.

You’re on a first date and the guy is a raging d—bag. Is it OK to sneak out?

The best advice I have is to always have at least 100 bucks cash stashed in your purse. If you have to call a taxi service, you have to have emergency money.

The next Chelsea Market?

Don't worry; we found the pop-up fair exclusively dedicated to food. Jamestown Properties, owner of Chelsea Market, has opened The Food Box within the Falchi Building (31-00 47th Ave., Long Island City). This 2,000-square-foot artisanal food fair has something for every palate. Check out vendors like ReCaFo (Real Caribbean Food), Jessy's Pastries, Vendy winner Khao Man Gai NY and The Kolache Co. There's not much info on this newbie yet, but we're hoping they launch a website soon!

Cocktail

Cocktail of the Week: The Rockette

Golden Cadillac (13 First Ave., 646-924-8153) is a newcomer to the NYC restaurant scene, but it's got an old-timey feel that we can't get enough of. The space, designed as a 1970s cocktail den, celebrates the holidays with its Rockette cocktail ($13). The recipe comes from a 1961 "Diner's Club Drink Book" that was a hit in the '70s. Still, the recipe — vodka, lime juice, simple syrup and mint — is timeless.

Obama can do nothing right

Now a handshake and a cell phone picture are treasonous?

If President Obama had the Secret Service drive him to a pharmacy to pick up the last ingredient for a cure for the common cold, Fox News, Ted Cruz and the Tea Party would accuse the president of using the Affordable Care Act to waste taxpayer money (driving up the debt) on Kenyan black magic therapy with the intention of taking away the rights of God-fearing real Americans who enjoy runny noses and phlegm-filled coughs!

LARRY D FOWLER, VIA EMAIL

Think about shelter dogs before you get a pet

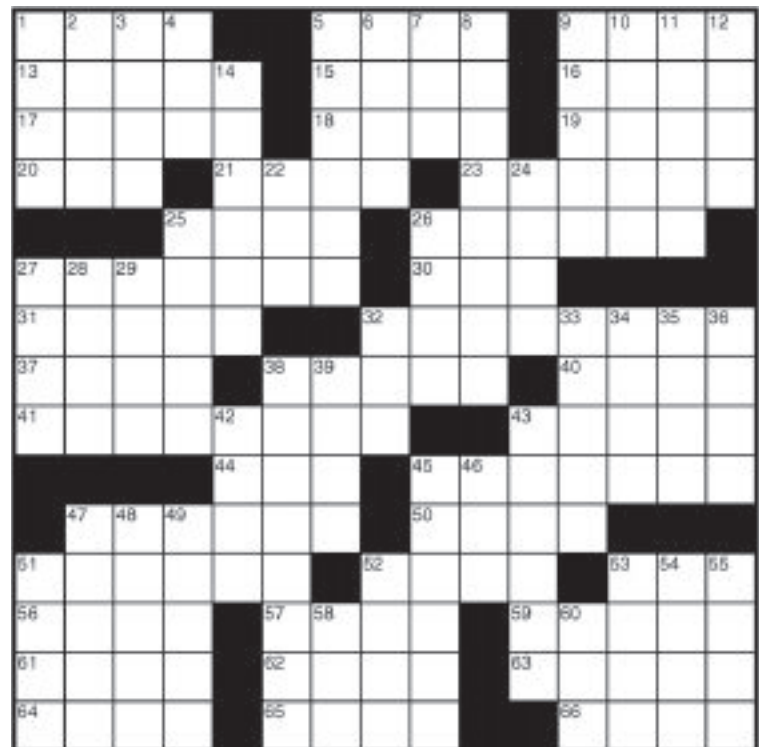

The one thing worse than neglecting animals is supporting their abuse — which is what many people do when purchasing their pets from pet stores. Pet store puppies often come from puppy mills — commercial dog-breeding facilities where puppies don't get adequate veterinary care. There are so many loving dogs at shelters that need to be adopted. JORDAN RUBENSTEIN, VIA EMAIL

Lankster ready to fill in for Cromartie

NFL. The corner could step in for Cromartie who is dealing with a concussion he suffered last week.

A head injury to Antonio Cromartie could open up the door for cornerback Ellis Lankster to make his first NFL start — short of a one-snap package-specific start in 2012 — this Sunday against the Panthers. And, it won't be an easy task.

If Lankster gets the nod from the coaching staff, he will likely have the challenge of going up against Panthers wide receiver Steve Smith. The 34-year-old Smith, a five-time Pro Bowler, is putting up some big numbers for the Panthers as he leads the team with 60 receptions for 681 receiving yards.

Primarily a role player, Lankster sounded a bit brazen in his readiness for this Sunday.

"Steve Smith? It will be great, I'm ready," Lankster told Metro. "They're finally giving me a chance if 'Cro' can't go. I'm ready."

"I already know how

Quoted

"Might as well put boxing gloves on those kids. We'd pay to watch that one. ... Steve Smith and him are very similar that way — very competitive guys."

Rex Ryan, Jets head coach
On Lankster matching up with the physical Steve Smith

Steve Smith is and I've got attitude about me too. [He is a] good route runner, quick hands, aggressive. ... He's legit."

In his fourth year in the league, Lankster has been a special teams player and played reserve roles on defense, but never as a consistent contributor. Sunday would be his chance to prove that he deserves a larger role.

On Wednesday, head coach Rex Ryan said either Lankster or Darrin Walls would step in opposite Dee Milliner if the head injury prevented Cromartie from starting. Lankster ran exclusively with the first team in Wednesday's practice.

Lankster played 24 snaps, all on special teams, in the win over the Raiders last Sunday.

Giants change focus with playoffs gone

Giants wideout Victor Cruz has been steadfastly against calling his squad "spoilers," noting the negative connotation it has.

But with the realization that the Giants are eliminated from playoff contention, and the next two weeks will feature teams prominently in the post-season race (the Seahawks and Lions), Cruz may have to rethink that label — begrudgingly.

"I still wouldn't say spoilers. Nobody's excited or happy to be in this position," Cruz said. "[But] everybody's going to have a little edge about them, naturally."

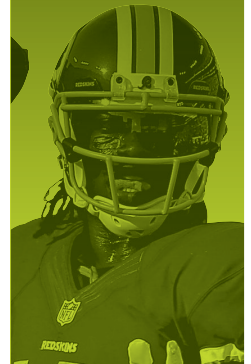

That edge might be needed to match the intensity of Seattle.

"If you're not ready to play, they will embarrass you and laugh about it," said Justin Tuck. "But I'm not in the business of being embarrassed."

Griffin III out for Cousins

The Redskins are out of the playoff race and now their top star is out of the starting quarterback role. Head coach Mike Shanahan said Wednesday he will start Kirk Cousins for the rest of the season to prevent injury to Robert Griffin III.

Dubi returns

Rangers struggling on offense

Head coach Alain Vigneault stood at the podium following yet another dispiriting loss and acknowledged the obvious.

The personnel he has at his disposal does not necessarily fit with the brand of hockey he is trying to implement. But despite all evidence to the contrary, the onus is not on general manager Glen Sather to acquire players whose talents mesh better with his system.

"No. My job as a coach is to analyze the personnel that I have and put a system in place that best suits them," Vigneault said after the Rangers' loss to Nashville Tuesday night. "That's my responsibility. That's what I'm trying to do right now."

The Rangers welcome the Blue Jackets and old friends Brandon Dubinsky and Artem Anisimov into the Garden tonight. The Rangers enter Thursday's game having lost three in a row and having been outscored 30-22 in their last nine games.

"The difficulty of our offense right now [in] scoring goals [makes it] very challenging," Vigneault said. "We need to find ways to win, whether that be getting a blocked shot at the right time from one of our players or whether it's a goal from our fourth line or our 'D.'"

Pitcher relief

Report: Mets sign Colon

Mets fans were not going to be happy if Curtis Granderson was their only addition this offseason. We'll have to wait and see how they feel about a 40-year-old pitcher with a steroid past.

CBS Sports reported Wednesday night the team agreed to terms with former Oakland pitcher Bartolo Colon for two years and $20 million.

The Mets are down a key starter with Matt Harvey having Tommy John surgery.

Colon was suspended 50 games in August 2012 for failing a test for elevated levels of testosterone. METRO

Jordan Todman is an excellent play with Jones-Drew on the shelf. / GETTY IMAGES

NFL news

Robert Griffin III's benching is worse for Alfred Morris than Pierre Garcon and the passing game. Sunday starter Kirk Cousins is a good bet to resuscitate Garcon's value.

is to simply insert Toby Gerhart into lineups, but that's complicated by his hamstring injury. The better move is to add Jordan Todman, the speedy backup to Maurice Jones-Drew (doubtful, hamstring). Todman will be facing the Bills at home.

Injuries to star players are brutal at any point of the season. But to sustain them in Week 14, after four long months of hard work, when all the money is on the line? That's a swift shot to the family jewels.

Never fear, however. Injury leads to opportunity, and there is plenty of it available cheaply as we try to replace Rob Gronkowski, Adrian Peterson, Maurice Jones-Drew, Wes Welker and others.

there with them if not for his preseason hip injury. Pitta is the intermediate option Joe Flacco desperately needs, and he also excels in the red zone. Now healthy, he's a legit threat for five to seven catches and a score the rest of the way.

Gronked out

The Gronk Spike and the Jimmy Graham jumpshot were two of the biggest difference-making sights in fantasy football. At a thin position, they soared above the rest. However, a healthy Dennis Pitta would have been right

All Day misery

You had the No. 1 overall pick and took Peterson. Congratulations. Now it's time to dig in and do some work. The logical move

Concussion machine

Wes Welker has now sustained two concussions in a month, putting him out for Week 15 and very questionable for Week 16. Ideally, owners have built up enough at wideout to sustain this. Guys like Roddy White, Julian Edelman and Michael Crabtree have come back from the dead to give the position depth. But if you need upside plays, look to rookies Da'Rick Rogers and Cordarrelle Patterson.
